Brown Sports Network looks to help students break into the sports industry

➤ READ THE FULL STORY HERE

"One week ago, Nikolas Rohrmann '26 and Charlie Pliner '26 filled what they saw as a glaring gap on campus: Brown's lack of preprofessional opportunities in the sports industry. The duo founded Brown Sports Network, the first on-campus club dedicated to connecting Brown students with careers across the sports industry. The club will host guest speaker events, facilitate hands-on projects, and provide students with networking opportunities. A lot of students 'dream of working in sports, but most people don't really know how to get in,' Pliner said in an interview with The Herald. 'We hope this will show people what's possible in the sports industry.'"

TSG works together with Brown Sports Network

The Brown Sports Network is a student-led initiative at Brown University that creates a community dedicated to connecting Brown University students with sports organizations and industry leaders. TSG now has a cooperation with this network, which should continue to have a positive effect, especially with regard to its activities in the USA.

A team of four TSG employees visited the Brown University in September 2024 to inform its employees and students. Jan Mayer, Dr. Adam Beavan and Sascha Härtel gave presentations on site about the work of the Kraichgau team. "In summary, it can be said that as a village club, we were able to inform a renowned Ivy League university about our extensive knowledge and our path in TSG talent development. This visit has now resulted in the partnership with Brown Sports Network, which we are very pleased about," says Jan Mayer.

TSG's collaboration with the Brown Sports Network consists of Brown students helping TSG with various case studies to enter the US market even more strongly by finding key organisations with which TSG can work together. "It's about spreading our knowledge, our services and our brand even more widely throughout the country," says Mayer.
